Objective: Contract position working as a trainer/writer for either for profit or non-profit businesses.

Qualifications:

- Teacher/Trainer - Mel is a gifted, credentialed educator and communicator who excels in making complex ideas accessible to individuals of all ages and educational backgrounds. She has taught college and graduate level classes to second-career professionals at Apex School of Theology, lead youth groups in several UMC congregations, privately tutored school-age children, guided senior-adult bible studies, and offered on-the-job training in corporate settings, including IBM, Inc. In conjunction with the above, Mel creates user friendly curriculum and supporting documentation.
- Writer/Editor - A writer with clear, well organized, persuasive prose, Mel is capable of creating most forms of business communication including white papers, business plans, technical manuals, user guides and presentations. Mel’s work with non-profit corporations includes: creating, editing and maintaining several web pages; writing grants; crafting public presentations and advertising; and editing and contributing to a monthly periodical, The Mosaic Monthly, published by a small, non-profit organization, The Mosaic Rural Wellness Center, Inc.
- Consulting - An expert in adult education, Christian education, art theology and event planning and experienced in forming non-profit organizations, Mel offers consulting services to individuals and institutions. Clients have used her services for community research and outreach, creating documentation for non-profit organizations, developing retreats and Christian education programs, and designing educational and training plans for businesses.
